Born in West Belfast in 1948 into a family with close ties to both the trade union and republican movements, Gerry Adams is the eldest of ten children. He writes with affection of his mother, an articulate and gentle woman, of his father, a republican activist who had been jailed at the age of sixteen, and of his grandmother, who nurtured in him a love of reading.

"Before the Dawn can be read as the history of the last quarter-century in Northern Ireland, from the perspective of someone who educated himself and came to power within one of the traditions—a crucial one at the moment—of the province. . . . Adams has written this autobiography to define his own position, rather than that of others.
